LISTING TITLE

MAY 9, 2012, CATEGORY 3 (FOR RESOURCE NO DATE)

It seems every year around this time we see a lot of fast-paced legislative actions and agendas and this year is no different. Nationally, three congress(wo)men have introduced an amendment to a bill being debated that would effectively cut off funding for the Department of Justice to perform medical marijuana raids in legally permitting states. You can read more about the bill/amendment and how you can take action here.

At the same time, Colorado was coming to a vote of the so-called "Per Se DUID Bill" regarding the 5 nano-gram of THC limit for driving impaired rule. In an awkward and ugly turn, though favorable for the industry, the Republican controlled House decided to close the legislative session early to avoid having to vote on a Colorado Gay Rights to Civil Unions Bill. The closure left 30 bills scheduled for vote out in the cold, including the DUID bill. For now, Colorado MMJ patients retain their rights to prove their level of alleged intoxication in a court of law in front of a jury of their peers, as it should be.

Update 5/15/2012: After a few days of worry that the "Per Se DUID Bill" would be passed in the special legislative session the measure has once again been tabled. There was concern that a Republican controlled Congress would pass the measure but when Nancy Spence (R) decided to carry on with her vacation plans despite the special session the vote ended in a tie. So once again, for now, Colorado MMJ patients retain their rights to prove their level of alleged intoxication in a court of law in front of a jury of their peers.
